Welcome to Your Own Unique Local Community Church

It is said that around 70% of us have some kind of belief, but we don't have the opportunity to express it. Most of us rarely go to church, and we don't want to, except perhaps at Easter or Christmas. Yet today churches serve all sorts of purposes, from being places to get married to tourist centres, with relics and paintings. Others have been bought by developers and turned into residential flats and houses.

In Barnes we have a unique 19th century non-denominational community church, with a special remit - to heal. The people that run it have not allied the church to any particular group or sect, but look after a beautiful Victorian sacred building, making it a place for people to visit with a view to healing. It's a community focused place of worship; the church is used for weddings, baby blessings, educational and sacred purposes.

Above all it's a unique centre for skilled healers to administer to people and also animals that may be in need of help.

Regular Weekly healing sessions take place on a Tuesday evening, between 7.00 and 8.30, and also on Thursdays mornings between 10.30am and 1.30pm. Individual two-to-one group healing is available sometimes, and refreshments are served after the healing sessions are finished.

Because it is a truly people orientated facility, Barnes Healing

A qualified trainer, Caroline has been working with crystals for 10 years, of which seven were spent at the International College of Crystal Healing, working with shamans and other experts.

She believes that it is her background as a teacher that explains why she so readily wants to share her knowledge.

The workshop opens with a meditation using crystals to encourage and inspire attendees to appreciate and experience the innate power of these beautiful objects: "I work with the spirit of them, revealing differences in themselves, their character, shape, whether they have been carved or not, and of course their origin and type."

The crystals form a crucial relationship with the group dynamic, the space within The Healing Church and the wisdom of their teacher. It is a sacred and inspirational combination. The day includes explanations on remote healing, an understanding of cleansing the crystals, and above all how to use them for loving and healing purposes. The originality and creativity of the workshop means that it is as rewarding to students as it is to those more experienced in crystal lore and wisdom.
